Re: California "Proposition 65" Product Warnings

Dear Customer:

You may be aware that the State of California requires specialized consumer product warnings where a significant exposure to certain regulated chemicals could result in a significant increased risk of cancer or reproductive harm. That law is known as California Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986 (or more commonly, "Proposition 65"). To address this issue, Ex-Cell Kaiser had tested representative product components posing the highest risk of exposure to lead, cadmium and hexavalent chromium, three metals which exist in several of our products and which are regulated under Proposition 65. As described below, those tests show that no Proposition 65 warnings are required.

From our testing, the sample product materials were determined to have very low concentrations of these materials. Those low concentrations, when coupled with typical if not conservative daily usage (exposure) patterns, were found to fall within the State's "Safe Harbor" exposure levels for these chemicals. The Safe Harbor numbers constitute acceptable daily exposures considered by the State to be exempt from the requirements of Proposition 65 labeling.

Consequently, we are not required to use any type of Proposition warning label on the product packaging or through other marketing formats (e.g., internet sales) for these materials.

We truly appreciate your interest in our products and future business relationship.

Best regards,

Ex-Cell Kaiser, LLC.
